

LIMERICKS #4 - 6

by David L. Hatton

POLITICAL

No statesmen I know are confessing the dirt (where their paws have been messing)
swept under the rug
with an innocent shrug
while constituents clap with their blessing.

COVER-UP

The barfly's incessantly thinking that no one's aware he's been drinking, but all who can smell
can quite easily tell
that breath-mints won't cover such stinking.

ROMANCE

The abracadabra of dating has little to do with your mating.
Just talk with the miss (there'll be decades to kiss!),
take walks in the park or go skating.
