

SKEPTICS

Most arguments with skeptics
Are mainly wastes of time.
Despite how sound the logic,
They'll reason and they'll rhyme
By clever traps with loopholes
Laid out for fools to spring.
Their hidden, guiding standard
Is doing their own thing.

Good questions have pat answers.
They've memorized them well
From unbelieving scholars
And voices haunting hell.
Wise words won't be convincing,
But met with trick and taunt,
For truth's not what they're after
But thinking how they want.

— David L. Hatton, 4/4/2016